TRANSFORMATIVE JUSTICE STUDIES
A Collaboration with the Oak Park Community
advancing transformative justice in schools

Who should take this experience?

Undergraduate students interested in social justice educational models.

Courses provide credit toward degrees in African American Studies, Chicano Studies, and the Education minor, as well as the GE requirements.

Check in with your advisor to see if TJS is a good fit for you.

Engage in historiographies of social movements and make the connection with present day social, political, economic, and educational issues and organizing (redlining, gentrification, school suspensions, police brutality, community trauma, racial justice, and radical healing).

Students will:
- Take classes in African American Studies, Chicana/o Studies, and Education
- Intern in local schools
- Work with community organizations to improve the lives of immigrants and refugees living in the Sacramento area

Application is open for the Fall 2021 Program.

gas.ucdavis.edu/experiences/
Angela Taylor, Program Coordinator: gas@ucdavis.edu
Transformative Justice Studies

Maisha Winn
Professor and Co-Director
Transformative Justice in Education Center

Torry Winn
Assistant Professor of Teaching
Co-Director, Transformative Justice in Education Center

Lorena V. Márquez
Assistant Professor
Chicana/o Studies

Courses
- EDU 150 Culture and Diversity in the Sociopolitical Context (4 units)
- AAS 130 Education in the African-American Community - 4 units / GE: SS
- CHI 110 Sociology of the Chicana/o Experience (4 units / GE: SS)
- EDU 198 (Seminar): The Application of 5 Pedagogical Stances (4 units)

Internship
Students will work in teams of 4-5 at a local school, community-based organization, or business.

The 5 Pedagogical Stances are the framework for transformative justice studies.

gas.ucdavis.edu